Prologue

Amelia was a romantic, hardworking, and creative student. She loved her parents deeply, had a best friend had a crush, loved her siblings, loved her classmates, she practically loved everyone. But unfortunately the love wasn't retaliated. Everything Amelia did wasn't good enough. Her crush was the popular boy of the school and didn't even notice her, her parents never acknowledged her because to them, she was sent just to seek attention.

Amelia had a family of 7. They were 3 boys and two girls, Amelia was the last. Amelia's parents only planned to have four kids which they did but Amelia came into the picture. They believed that Amelia was an attention seeker even before she was born and they maltreated her. They fed her rarely and her eldest brother, 'Lucas' would hit her to vent his anger.

The 3 boys treated the second to the last born, 'Sienna' like a diamond totally ignoring Amelia. To them Sienna was their little sister and not Amelia.

In school, Sienna would spread in her lies about Amelia making people dislike her and bully her. Amelia confided in her best friend, 'Mia' because she was still there. She was the first person to never insult her and she felt like she was the light in her dark world.

But Mia never saw her as a friend, she just listens, quiet, keeps to herself and at times saw Amelia as a freak.

Amelia had a crush on ‘Jasper’. She never liked him because he was rich or handsome, just liked him because he never insulted or bullied her like everyone else. To her there were two lights shining bright in her dark world, the only light she looked up to Jasper and Mia. She did everything for Jasper. She covered up for him when he wasn’t in school or did something bad, did his assignments and even skipped school to take care of him when he was sick.

But the main question is... will she be happy at the end?

End of Prologue

Amelia was just heading to submit, she and Jasper's assignment when she came across an empty classroom and saw the back figure of Jasper.

Deciding to stop by and start a conversation with him, she walked into the classroom but the books in her hands dropped to the floor and her eyes widened as she saw the scene in front of her.

Mia and Jasper kissing, Mia's arms were wrapped around his neck while Jasper's arms wrapped around her waist. Mia noticing Amelia pulled away from him but not entirely.

"What... what are you guys doing?" Amelia asked tears filling her eyes.

"What does it look like we're doing!?" Jasper snapped.

"I..." Amelia was unable to finish her sentence, as the pain of heart break held her down.

"Amelia, I'm sorry but, I can't hide my feelings for Jasper anymore. Jasper loves me and I love him too. I can't possibly leave him to be with someone as desperate as you, can I?" Mia said.

"But you're my best friend..." Mia suddenly cut her off.

“When did I become your best friend? When did we even become friends Amelia?”

Amelia stumbled back, her heart breaking, each word hitting her like her dagger, heading straight to her heart.

“Please leave.” Jasper snapped his voice edged with annoyance. Amelia turned on her heals not even bothering to pick up the book before leaving.

Soon school was over and she went home, but as usual was greeted with disgusted looks from her mother and sister. She didn’t even bother greeting them as she knew they would only respond with anger and hatred. She went straight to her room, her food lying cold on the floor. Of course they would drop her food in the room. They don’t want her eating with them in the dinning. Soon her father and 2nd brother barged in.

Her second brother dragged her by the hair and threw her to the floor before slapping her on the face brutally.

“Why are you so foolish girl!? Can’t you see that Mia and Jasper is a really good match!? Must you have to interrupt them on their first intimate moment!?” He said as he kept sapping her. Amelia’s father came in.

“The last born was really so stupid! I wanted only four kids, but you came in the picture. What were you thinking we were going to treat you for?! A diamond!? Now you did not only interrupt their intimate moment but also provoked that perfect boy! How do you think he’s going to be with someone as pathetic as you!?” Her father yelled. Before Amelia could realize what was going on, her father started whipping her with his belt. Amelia cried and begged for them to stop but he didn’t listen if anything, he hit harder. When both her father and her second brother ‘Rowan’ were satisfied, they stopped and left.

But it didn’t end there for Amelia because Lucas came back stressed and when he heard about Amelia interrupting Mia and Jasper’s kiss he stormed in with a whip. The whip he usually used to hit her and didn’t even speak before he started.

“This is a lesson for you to mind your place!” So just like that, the light Amelia thought she had only darkened her life more.

When Lucas was done he left and what Amelia could see with her reddened eyes.

Was a frame of her grandmother, she held her hands out as if wanting her to follow her. Amelia smiled her grandmother finally proved she was the only one who ever cared for her but she was dead. Amelia raised her hands to reach hers but the image immediately disappeared.

She wept alone, broken, bruised, beaten no one to comfort her.

The Next Day

Amelia went to school. Immediately she stepped into the classroom a bucket of water poured on her. She was completely drenched in water. Soon her classmates threw papers on her. She stood there, body soaked, paper thrown around her, still bruised and injured. There was no way the days were getting better.

Amelia lived on that semester like that, she stayed away from both Mia and Jasper but they didn't care less. She never bothered to watch or disturb them just left them there.

One day, Amelia was in the library bruises still on her face but she wasn't alone. Mia was there as well, only the both of them. Amelia never glanced at her just stayed quiet reading the book with cold eyes. Mia knowing Amelia thought she was reading a romance novel as usual but this was different. Amelia was reading something different, plain her Literature textbook.

Amelia still didn't glance at her just stayed quiet. A part of Mia missed those times where Amelia would talk to her non-stop, how she cared for her like they were related by blood.

She walked up to where Amelia sat but Amelia didn't even acknowledge her.

"Amelia?" Mia called but no answer. Amelia stared at the book blankly no emotion written on her face.

"Amelia?" She called again but no response. "Amelia I'm talking to you!" She yelled but still no reply. She shook Amelia bringing Amelia back to reality but the cold, unreadable eyes that stared at her made Mia tremble.

Amelia stared at Mia but not saying anything as if waiting for her to say something but Mia was lost in her blank expression. Mia froze.

Jasper came in looking for Mia but was shocked to see her frozen trembling standing beside Amelia.

“What’s going on here?” Jasper asked but no response. Amelia stood then bowed her head respectfully slowly before leaving. Mia watched her go shocked, trembling.

“Something is wrong with Amelia.” Mia said her voice filled with fear and worry.

“Overreacting? Have you heard about what they do to her in her class because of our relationship!?” Mia asked her voice filled with frustration and concern but Jasper only wrapped his arms around her waist.

“That’s her business, let’s read your favourite novel I bought for us.” Jasper said trying to change the topic. Mia nodded and followed him to a seat in the library.

Amelia got home but her things were packed outside. She was about to walk in when Lucas stopped her.

“You’ve been disowned so you can now leave! Get out!” Lucas shouted. Tears filled Amelia’s eyes.

“Where would I go to? I have no place to go...” She pleaded but it only landed on deaf ears.

“Get out!” He commanded. Amelia picked up the few things she could pick and left. Tears streamed down her cheeks. She had no idea of where to go but kept walking.

Her own family threw her out of the house, her best friend betrayed her, he crush she did everything to impress used and trashed her and the person she wanted to rely on the most was dead. She wept bitterly.

Days passed, she remained homeless, rain fell on her and she hadn’t eaten, she was paling.

3 YEARS PASSED

A man noticed her and her features and decided to make her one of his members. Turns out the man was a mafia boss, and was the next in line to become the most influential mafia king in the world. He took care of Amelia planning to make her his wife.

He was overly touchy with her and flirty which Amelia hated. She learned everything she had to learn with diligence and resilience and the unchanging bitterness in her heart. Soon she became sharper than her teacher, overcoming bodied men, growing in wisdom and terrifying knowledge. Her shapes stood out more and her beauty was terrifyingly outstanding. She mastered every skill, every trick and forced him to claim her as boss before finally killing him.

It only took a matter of days when the mafia king died out of shock after he heard about his son death making her to be the mafia queen directly. She changed her name from Amelia Louis to Maeve meaning, ‘She who rules.’ She never smiled her look cold, red and black dresses filled her closet. She was stunning.

Fate knew its way of bringing people together, as her father came to asked one of the mafia members for a loan. The mafia members told her about this. And she asked to see him. She drank a red wine as Mr Louis stepped in.

He was beyond shocked to see his daughter seating on the throne, holding a glass cup of red wine looking like she owned the world. When she noticed him a cruel smirked formed on her lips.

“Look who we have here begging for my money.” She said her voice cold and her tone unreadable.

“What are you doing here?” Mr Louis asked stunned.

“What does it look like I’m doing? Mr Louis?” She replied coldly her dark smirk still on her lips.

“You’re meant to be on the streets!” He yelled.

“Yet look at where I am, on my throne sipping my wine.” She replied calmly.

“I’m still your father! You still bare my surname! You should have...”

Maeve cut him off before he could finish his sentence “Stop right there. I am no more Amelia Louis. I am Maeve, the queen of the most influential mafia group in the continent. What makes you think you could come to my place to insult me?"

The guards around, trembled in fear at the arrogance and danger laced in her voice, her father fell quiet as she stood, holding the glass of wine in her hand.

She continued. "Since you brag about being my father so much, then you must be worthy." She walked until she was face to face with him. "Can you afford this drink? Can you even afford the glass itself?" She asked. She dropped the glass with terrifying ease making the glass shatter to the floor startling him. "But I have more than enough money to buy you and your entire family."

She walked pass him then gave an order. "Make sure he walks bare footed in the pieces of glass and afterwards whip him 22 strokes. The first 15 for making me feel unworthy to be his daughter and throwing me out of his house. The 3 strokes for my suffering and 3 more strokes to prove how unworthy he is to be my father. Then throw him out without giving him one cent." With that she left.

Mr Louis begged and cried but only falling on deaf years. She went to her chambers where she sat on a sofa looking out the see through glass, a dark smirk curling up on her lips.

Few Days Later

Mrs Louis called Jasper, Jasper was now prosperous, his business was now blooming and he owned most of the businesses in the country. He was practically the richest man.

Jasper offered to help but on the condition that he sees their daughter. She was hesitant but agreed.

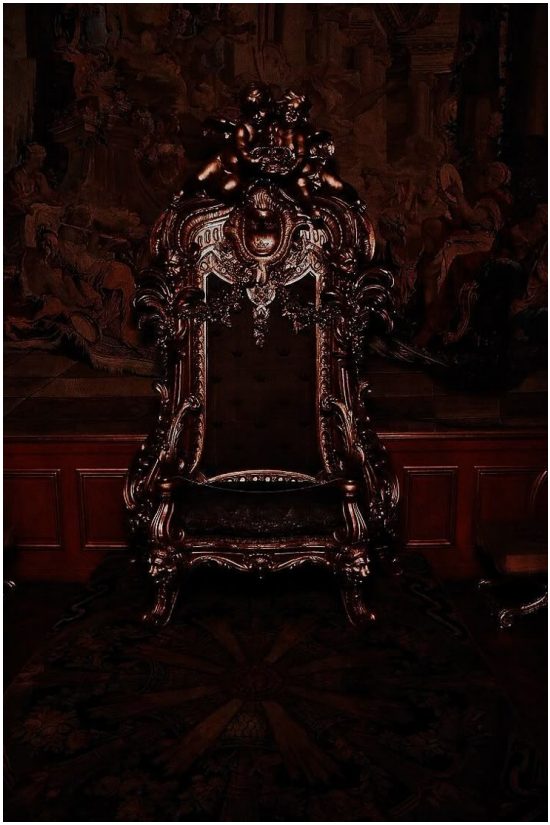

They arrived at the place it was luxurious, huge, elegant and typically royal.

A guard walked them into the meeting room and Mrs Louis herself was stunned at how luxurious and big the room was.

Soon Maeve stepped inside, and sat on the throne.

She ordered for the guard that walked them in not acknowledging their presence yet. The guard walked in front of her trembling. Jasper was stunned by her beauty he glow. “So people can now come in here and go as they please huh?” She asked her voice filled with calm danger.

“N-no ma’am... I-I thought you asked for them” He stuttered.

“But see what your thought has caused you.” She turned to the other guards. “You know what to do”

The other guards immediately acted dragging him out of the room.

She finally turned to them. “Since you’re here what do you want?” He voice was stern rigid.

“Amelia...” She cut Jasper off before he could go on.

“Ah! It’s ma’am to you.” She said her voice stoic and cold.

Jasper eyes narrowed frustrated. “What happened to you? Why are you like this? You used to be so sweet and lovely.”

“I categorized that as stupid.” She replied.

“Stupid? All those times you took care of me? Those times you covered for me? Those things you did for our classmates even after everything is stupid?” He asked frustration filling his voice.

“You don’t get it do you? Everything I did to you and those fools for you and those fools were stupid.”

Jasper was shocked at how cold she was being. “Amelia... you weren’t like this before.” Before he could blink, she stood pulled a gun from the tray next to her and pointed it to his head. Mrs Louis was terrified.

“The next time you call me Amelia, you’d know why I was called the perfect killer before I became a mafia queen." Her voice dropped low, dangerous, "Final warning!"
